

BIBLIOGRAPHY – THE SEARCH FOR TUN TAVERN

I have withdrawn this project on Tun Tavern, Samuel Nicholas and 18th Century Philadelphia for now, at least the “show-and-tell” version. The work will go in ‘dry dock’ for more lengthy background work at some point in the future. For the 400 or so scribd readers and students I am leaving this bibliography which strongly supports any inquiry into this place and period.

In 1963 “Sir!” was used only when initiating any communication with officers or NCO Drill Instructors. “Sir! Private Malsbary requests to speak with the Drill Instructor.”

- ¹ Buell, Augustus C., John Paul Jones, Founder of the American Navy, Charles Scribner’s Sons, New York, 1901 – Researchers be careful citing this work. Buell’s works are notorious for fabrication, plagiarism and historical error. Keeping this in mind, this two volume work remains to be a great read. Even fabrications from this 1901 work can be helpful in viewing the big picture of the late 18th Century revolutionary period. Buell worked in the Philadelphia shipyard of Charles H. Cramp, (competitor of Joshua Humphreys mtm) of whom his posthumously published biography was written.
